

John Dyer
Associate Vice President of Workforce Development
American Association of Community Colleges (AACC)

John Dyer serves as Associate Vice President of workforce development for the American Association of Community Colleges (AACC) where he is responsible for supporting the department across multiple projects. His responsibilities include creating new proposal concepts and submissions for workforce and economic development funding in sector and thematic-specific areas, conducting project management and support on complex, task-heavy and multi-faceted workforce and economic development initiatives within the department, as well as producing department materials and toolkits and managing the products produced by project teams.

He is the former Director of Community and Corporate Affairs at White Mountains Community College, in Berlin, New Hampshire, where he was responsible for the workforce, economic, and community development efforts of the college. This included maintaining a knowledge and understanding of competitive issues facing business and industry and the ability to provide companies with technology assistance and management approaches that offer favorable economic and competitive impact. Additional duties included the development and incubation of new programs, and he was the project manager for all grant funded activities at WMCC. He is a graduate of Leadership North Country class of '07, Leadership New Hampshire class of '08, and has served on a variety of local, regional, state, and national boards with a focus on workforce and economic development. He holds a B.A. in Government from California State University-Sacramento.
